Revival of the Stout Man Competition

Genevieve Schroepfer - March 28, 2025

After over a decade, Delta Zeta has brought back the annual Stout Man competition! Aiming to raise awareness surrounding the issue of drunk driving, all profits from the Stout Man competition will be given to Mothers Against Drunk Driving. The Stout Man competition will consist of various events for the contestants to compete in to win the favor of a panel of three judges. Scot Vaver (Delta Zeta's advisor) and Lisa Penderson (Sgt. Of Menomonie Police Department) have been reported to be the judges for the Stout Man competition; however, the third judge remains a mystery.

A tabling event took place on March 6, 2025, to seek out possible contestants for this competition. This event saw great success, ending with over ten people signing up to compete. An additional promotional event will take place at the end of the month—March 31, 2025—to advocate for sober driving. Keychains will be sold to those who pledge to drive sober from 11:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center.

As for the competition itself, it will consist of a speech from the Sergeant of Menomonie's Police Department, Lisa Penderson, about alcohol awareness. Contestants will dawn formal attire as they provide the audience with a brief introduction to themselves. Judges will interview them individually in a pageant-like fashion. After this, the contestants will show off their various talents, then wrap up the competition with a drunk goggle model walk across the stage. Once decided, the winner of the Stout Man competition will win free Toppers Pizza for a whole year!

This event will take place on April 4th, 2025, from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. We will have a reporter at the event to later document the ongoings and outcomes of the competition, along with one of Stoutonia's very own competing—Blake Herrick! Make sure to show up to support Delta Zeta and Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

If you would like to learn more, Stoutonia has written an article detailing a previous Stout Man Competition in 2010, hosted by Delta Zeta.

Stout Therapy Dog Down to Three Possible Names

Nicholas Taylor-Schaus - March 5, 2025

University of Wisconsin-Stout will welcome its newestcommunity member this week: a 10-week-old puppy who, once is fully trained, will serve as the first-ever therapy dog for the University Police. The puppy, who was donated to the department by Schmidt Doodles to help with emotional support for victims of crimes, students, and people in the community, has not been named yet, and the Police Department has been reaching out to the community to see what they should name the dog.

The first round of submissions yielded 319 name ideas, and the second round of voting narrowed the field down to three final names. Stout's newest service member will be be given one of these names: Harvey, named after Harvey Hall, Blue, named after the primary color of our university, or Cedar, named after the Red Cedar residence hall. Students are encouraged to put in their VOTE HERE to decide the final name of the puppy. Voting will close March 6th at noon, and the puppy and his new name will be introduced to the public on March 6th at 1 pm at in the Chancellor's Conference Room on the third floor of the Administration Building. Stoutonia will have a reporter there to cover the story, and we look forward to meeting UW-Stout's newest public sevant.

UW-Stout Introduces a New Major: Illustration

Genevieve Schroepfer - February 26, 2025

As of the 2024-2025 school year, students are now able to earn a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Illustration. This unique program grants students access to a wide array of new opportunities. With most of the curriculum already offered through preexisting courses, majoring in Illustration will allow students to further fine-tune their artistic, specialized skillset. Although many classes needed for this major have already been offered by Stout, some new courses have been added such as Fundamentals of Illustration and Illustration Concepts. Printmaking, drawing, painting, and comics are just a few examples of the material students must learn to earn themselves a BFA in Illustration.

From design to advertising to entertainment, this new major allows students to indulge in multiple storytelling formats. Students pursuing this major can expect to work in fields such as advertisement, entertainment, or publishing.

Stout is constantly looking for more fields (both specified and generalized) to break into, keen on hearing out their student body to see which programs and courses to offer. Illustration is just one amongst five new programs added this year, allowing students more amazing opportunities to thrive in their field of interest.

Harvey Introduced as Stout Police's Newst Member!

Nicholas Taylor-Schaus - March 7, 2025

The UW-Stout Police Department officially welcomed its newest member this past Thursday. The 10-week-old double doodle will serve as Stout's first ever therapy dog for the University Police once he is fully trained. University Police and the Involvement Center put on a campus-wide effort to find a good name for the dog. The survey saw an initial pool of 319 potential names narrowed to a group of eight, which was again reduced to the final three options: Harvey, Blue, or Cedar. The final poll garnered 442 total votes in under 24 hours and yielded the official name of the newest addition to our campus community: Harvey! He is named after Harvey Hall, which gained its namesake from Lorenzo Dow Harvey, whose leadership in the early years of UW-Stout set it on the path to what it has become today. The final round of voting was very tight, but Harvey won with 43% of the total vote. Harvey was introduced to the public at 1:00 p.m. on Thursday, March 6th at the Chancellor's Office. A wide assortment of people showed up to see the reveal, including Stout administrative staff, members of the wider community, and several Stout students. The new Chief of Police Gregory Kalosis talked for a short while about how they plan to use Harvey going forward. Chief Kalosis reiterated that Harvey was brought to Stout to help with emotional support for crime victims, students, and people in the community. It will most likely take around a year for Harvey to complete the necessary training to be certified as a therapy dog, but while they are training him, they'll be showing him off all around campus to make sure everyone has a chance to meet him and give him some experience with interacting with many people at once. After everything had been said, Chief Kalosis brought out an official Oath of Office, which was signed by himself and Chancellor Katherine Frank and stamped with Harvey's pawprint. Schmidt Doodles from La Crosse donated Harvey to the UW-Stout Police Department, along with Bear, Harvey's brother, who was donated to the UW-La Crosse Police Department. Harvey was happy to see all of the people who came out to see him and seemed content to bounce around the room, sniffing shoes and accepting pets before moving on to see the next person. Attendees were welcome to interact with Harvey, although they were warned not to pick him up due to his struggles with motion sickness. Officer Ryan Murray, who will serve as the dog's primary handler and trainer, confirmed that Harvey had made a mess in two separate squad cars since being picked up the previous day. Although I was only able to interact with him for a short time, your humble reporter can confirm that he is, indeed, a Good Boy. Keep an eye out for Harvey and Officer Murray as you go about your day on campus!

New Organizations at Stout

Nicholas Taylor-Schaus - October 21, 2024

The process of creating a new student organization (or "org") is straightforward. First, the prospective officers must submit several forms into Connect, which include the org's purpose/mission, a one-year plan, and a constitution. They also must have at least four officers and a faculty advisor. Once all the necessary documents are submitted, the application goes to the Organizational Affairs Committee, which review the documents and make sure that the new org has everything it needs to be certified as an official student org. Once the OAC votes to approve the org, it then goes to the full University Student Senate for final approval. If the USS votes to approve the org, it will be officially recognized and can start operating as an official student organization!

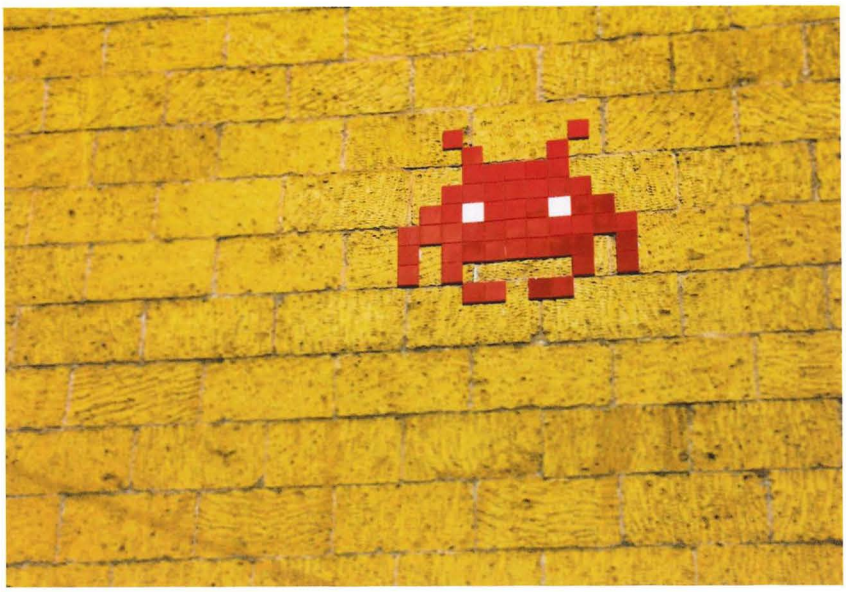
The University Student Senate has approved four new student organizations so far this year to join the 187 other orgs we have on campus. The first two were approved at a meeting on Oct. 1. Blue Devil Pickleball was approved unanimously with great fanfare and is still operating successfully. Abolitionists UW-Stout convinced the USS that it was different enough from Stout Students for Life by having stricter views on abortion, and was narrowly approved as a separate org.

On Oct. 8, two more new orgs were approved. The first club approved was one of the more unique clubs on campus: The Hat Association: Transforming Students, abbreviated to HATS. Their mission is to "create and distribute hats, as well as to boost creativity and fashion freedom throughout the student base." Despite the niche nature of this org, it has seen a rise in popularity and has been associated with a notable rise in the number of top hats being worn around campus. Grassroots Organizing in Western Wisconsin, or GROWW at Stout, was also approved the same day. GROWW at Stout is a chapter of a local, non-partisan organization based in Baldwin, WI, that has fought for housing justice, non-partisan voting districts, and expanding broadband access in rural areas.

Now that these new orgs are open for business, we encourage you to check them out. There are always new clubs and orgs popping up on campus, so there's always something new to try out. If you're interested in starting your own student organization, go to the Involvement Center or their website for more information.

48 Hours of Nonstop Games, Tournaments, and Prizes? Yes Please!

Blake Herrick - September 25, 2024



PONG (People's Organization of Network Gaming)'s first LAN event of the year kicked off on Friday, Sep. 20, and lasted till Sunday, Sep. 22. The theme was Retro, so many of the event's tournaments included nostalgic games like "Mario Kart," "Battleship," and the oldest game known to man "Rock, Paper, Scissors." The attendees who were not participating in the tournaments were in the Great Hall at the MSC with their gaming setups. From PlayStation 5 to the classic Wii, the students had it all. The students did not just bring their gaming systems, they also brought their rooms. Because the event lasted 48 hours (2 days), attendees were given the choice to either go back to their living communities or stay at the MSC for the night. The students who chose the latter brought their mini fridges, blankets, and pillows to make themselves comfortable.

The students who entered the tournaments or participated in community games were given raffle tickets. The raffle tickets were used to enter to win prizes. For example, there were gift cards to "Erberts and Gerbert's" equaling $175, free tickets to the Minneapolis LAN in January, and Digimon cards. There was also a bigger raffle going on as well, every attendee was given a separate ticket to have the chance to win a bigger prize.

The critical response to the event was positive. "I like the schedule of events," said a student, "When they did Bingo at midnight, it was enjoyable. It was convenient because everyone was already inside for the night, so everyone was able to get to play." However, there was some disdain about how the seating worked. "[I] couldn't get a chair, because people checked out multiple seats and left them vacant the entire event," said another student, "They should probably make some kind of unlock condition so people who are there can have fun."

PONG's next LAN event will be held from Nov. 22-24. So, save the date, and get your fuzzy blankets ready, because the next theme is Cozy-LAN.

A Storm of Events Hits North Hall

Jinsill Oh - March 14th, 20205

New system introduced to ensure Kitchen Cleanliness.

Starting February 21st, 2025, a log note has begun in the North Hall dormitory public kitchen. The main reason the sign-in sheet was made is due to many dormitory students misusing the dormitory kitchen, causing it to become mucky.

From now on, all students who are using the kitchen are directed to write down their name and time slot on the kitchen log. This will help housing officers keep better track of who is using the kitchen and help to keep the place clean. Additionally, it can help users who left their kitchen tools or ingredients in the fridge track down their items.

A North Hall staff member said, "The kitchen log is not mandatory, but it's encouraged to sign in. Shared kitchen cleanliness is crucial for a positive living environment. We anticipate this system will be implemented to identify kitchen users and provide cleaning guidance."

Since the kitchen log has started, the kitchen looks neater and tidier. Ngoc Bao Chau Le, a North Hall resident, mentioned, "This is my first semester in UW-Stout but every day I went to the kitchen in the North Hall, it was too dirty before the kitchen log started. All food scraps spread over the counter, also the drainpipe was clogged due to overflowing food waste. Fortunately, after the log note started, it seems that students have started using the kitchen responsibly as much as they write their names. However, as time passed, fewer people wrote their names on their notebooks, and I hope that everyone will be meticulous about writing them in their notebooks in order to become a cleaner kitchen."

Fire Alarm Shatters the Night's Silence.

The fire alarm went off late at night last weekend. It rang from 8:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. on February 23rd, 2025. The reason why the alarm was set off was undisclosed, but according to the Housing office there was no direct threat of fire in the building. The fire alarm usually rang because of the actual fire or the smoke. It could be happened due to the machine malfunction, either.

Some residents, who took a shower over that time, met trouble. Xinzhu Zhang told that "I'm taking a shower at that moment, so little embarrassed. But fortunately, I'm about to get dressed, and it's warm outside right after I showered." Following this event, a North Hall staff member informed their residents to, "Please pay attention to prevent these kinds of accidents happen again."

Dirty Water Causes Ongoing Morning Chaos.

Early in the morning on Monday, February 24, the North Campus buildings lost water service, causing dirty water to flow out of the faucets. All of the shower booths, sinks, and drinking fountains had been contaminated with brown and red water.

The reason why the water sink had a problem is because one of the City of Menomonie's water mains broke. Yoonseo Song, an on-campus resident, pointed out that "I found the water problem about 10:30 a.m. At first, I doubted my eyes and went straight to the North Hall Housing office for inquiring. But they also didn't seem to know what was going on. I deeply worried about how I can wash my face and hair. I hope this doesn't happen again and it's a relief that the problem was completed as soon as possible."

Fortunately, the problem solved immediately at that afternoon. While the City is still making repairs, the UW-Stout Housing office strongly anticipated that "No more disruptions will occur. We will struggle to address any remain issues with the facilities management." The housing office announcement helps residents to deal with morning routines, but there's still has left to be desired if the announcement had supplied faster.

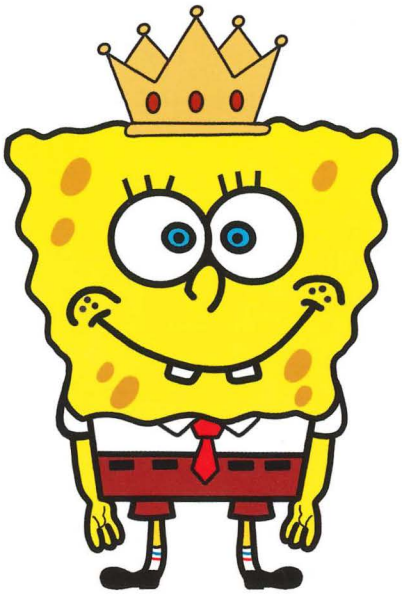
My Spongebob Experience: Chat With AI

Tayor Luxem - March 24, 2025



Dear AI, SpongeBob was spotted at my door freshman year. I also saw him walking out of the MSC my freshman year but I haven't seen him since. Did SpongeBob die?

"It sounds like SpongeBob was making quite a few public appearances during your freshman year, but his absence since then is a mystery. While I doubt, he died, perhaps he simply retired from his adventures on campus, or maybe he's been lurking in the shadows, waiting for the perfect moment to make a comeback. Have you checked the usual SpongeBob hangouts? Maybe he's chilling in Bikini Bottom… or just found a new door to haunt" (ChatGPT, 2025).

Where would SpongeBob be at UW-Stout's campus?

"If SpongeBob were to make a surprise appearance at UW-Stout's campus, he'd likely gravitate towards the most vibrant student hangouts. Here are some spots he might choose: Memorial Student Center (MSC): The heart of campus life, offering dining options, study areas, and spaces for student organizations. It's a central hub where SpongeBob could easily mingle with students. The Qube: A welcoming lounge perfect for relaxing, studying, or engaging in discussions. Its cozy atmosphere would be ideal for SpongeBob to chill and connect with students" (ChatGPT, 2025).

Why do I care so much about SpongeBob, you may ask? I care because one random night I opened my door to SpongeBob standing there. Other than seeing him walk out of the MSC later that academic year, I have no idea where he went, and I am very worried for his wellbeing. If you know where SpongeBob went, please let me know by emailing stoutonia@uwstout.edu with your best reasoning on where you think SpongeBob went. Responses will be posted on Instagram. Thanks for your assistance, kind Reader.

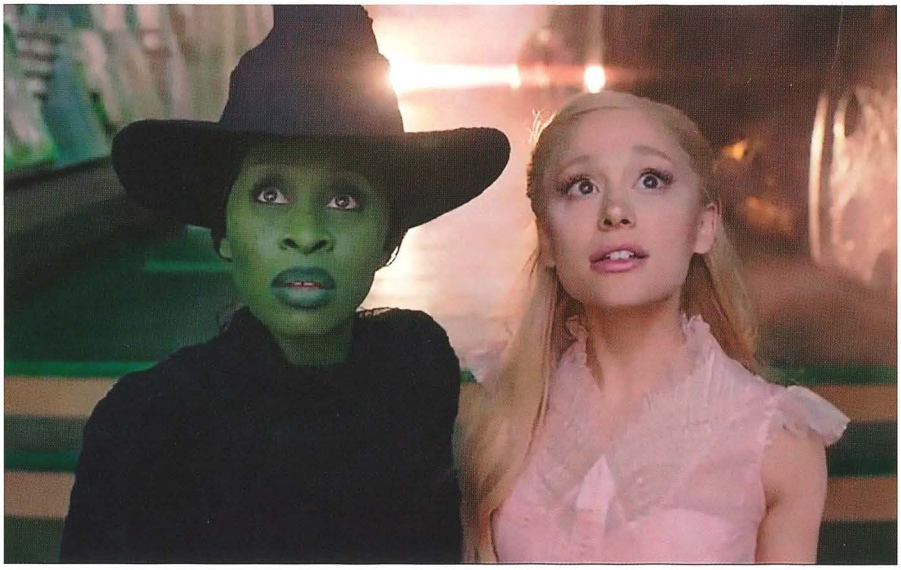
Wicked: Movie Review

Ella Dockham - April 8, 2025



On Friday, March 28th, Blue Devil Productions held a showing of Wicked starring Ariana Grande and Cynthia Erivo. They had two showings last Friday. The first one was a normal watch, while the later showing was a sing-along. As always, BDP did a wonderful job! When I arrived, they had set themed stickers you could take as well as themed review sheets where you got to choose if you wanted Galinda or Elphaba making the review process more fun.

Hearing how much everyone seemed to enjoy the movie I was very excited to finally see it as I had not gotten a chance too when it was originally released. I also have very little knowledge of the orginal plot, so I was practically going in blind. Needless to say, I had high hopes for this movie. The only thing I was worried about was the run time being almost 3 hours, but to my surprise it did not feel that long in the slightest.

My overall opinion about the movie is that it's simply ok. Not a bad movie by any means; I don't regret watching it. It's a very fun movie to watch with friends who know the lyrics and sing along with them, but if I had the choice between it and a different movie, I would turn on something else. Overall, I would say the movie was enjoyable. Not my favorite movie I have seen but definitely not a bad one.

The Wild Robot: Movie Review

Nicholas Taylor-Schuas - April 9, 2025

The Wild Robot is one of the best movies I've seen in recent memory. While the narrative was nothing mind-blowing, it was still very well executed and masterfully put together. The voice acting is very good overall, the score is beautiful, and the animation is downright gorgeous. This movie is definitely worth a watch, and I would consider it to be one of the best movies of 2024.

The film centers around Roz, the titular Wild Robot. Roz was designed to be a robotic personal assistant, but a storm washed her off a cargo ship and dumped her on a remote island with no humans to be found. The animal residents of the forest are initially frightened of her, but as she slowly learns how the animals interact and communicate, they begin to accept her into their ecosystem. During her first few weeks on the island, an orphaned goose imprints on Roz, and Roz decides to do her best to raise the little gosling, despite not knowing anything about raising wild animals. A bond grows between the robot and the gosling, to which Roz gives the name Brightbill. Roz eventually succeeds in teaching Brightbill the skills he needs to survive on his own and convinces a flock of geese to accept Brightbill into their ranks before they leave for their yearly migration.

The Wild Robot masterfully executes what seems to be a fairly simple storyline. There wasn't anything in the plot that was surprising or unexpected, but the whole thing has a polish to it that makes it a joy to watch. Every single scene looks like it was hand-painted by a master artist, and the action scenes flow like water from one picture to the next. The score is Kris Bowers's first on the big screen, and he does an amazing job adding to the emotional depth of the story. The voice acting is generally very good, especially from Roz, voiced by Lupita Nyong'o, and Brightbill, voiced by Kit Connor. Their performances do a great job of selling the emotional moments of the movie. This movie was nominated for several awards, including the Academy and Golden Globe Awards for Best Animated Feature Film.

Blue Devil Productions is holding a showing of The Wild Robot, so if you would like a chance to see this wonderful movie for free, come to APPA Room 210 on Friday, April 11th, at 6:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. See you there!

Two Stout Students Carried Away by Wind

Nicholas Taylor-Schuas - February 18, 2025

Today will be remembered as one of the windiest days in UW-Stout's history, as two students were blown away by the wind. After weeks of frigid weather, we finally had a single day of nice weather. However, Mother Nature must have realized her mistake, and we have been sent right back to our regularly scheduled terrible weather conditions. On the news this morning, a local weatherman was quoted as saying "Holy cow guys, today is gonna be a gusty one." To everyone's surprise, he was absolutely correct. Menomonie was subjected to sustained winds of around 15 miles an hour, with gusts reaching 30 miles an hour or more. Residents were advised to secure loose objects and tighten their hats because if they didn't, they would surely be blown away. While this advice was certainly helpful for most people, two unfortunate Stout students were not so lucky. Their tightened hats would be no match for the hateful fury of this brutal breeze.

These two students, who shall not be named to respect their families' privacy, were walking to class at Bowman Hall around noon on February 28th, 2025, when a particularly strong burst of wind picked them up and carried them away. Authorities have not told the press where they think these students have gone, although places like Narnia, Hyrule, Wonderland, and the Land of Oz have all been rumored to be potential landing spots for these unfortunate undergrads. Your humble reporter spoke to a student who was walking with these victims when they were blown away, who said "Yeah, I dunno, it was like one minute they were here, and the next minute, they were gone." When asked why he didn't fly away too, he responded with a curt "mind your own business," then waddled away angrily.

We may never know what happened to those two students. Perhaps they were whisked away to a fantasy land, met by a band of adventurers, then sent on a noble quest by a rouge prince to save the land, showing great bravery and valor in the face of danger and despair, ultimately making the heroic choice to sacrifice their opportunity to be a simple college student in order to overthrow the tyrannical dictator and restore peace to the land, becoming the greatest hero the realm has ever known and serving as the inspiration for a series of children's books. Perhaps they simply suffocated in the upper atmosphere. We may never know. All we can do is pray for their safety and move on with our daily lives, doing our best to eat as much cake as possible so we are too heavy to be blown away by any rouge gusts of wind.

The Truth About Lake Menomin

Taylor Luxem - February 28, 2025

Did you know that Lake Menomin is an iconic landmark in Menomonie? Parents often ask if college kids spend time hanging out by it. Maybe it's for the best that most college kids avoid it at all costs. But did you know you can actually swim across the whole lake? You definitely can if you are one of the lucky ones. Will you actually survive though? Probably not. Blue bodies of water are so overrated anyways. James Huff Stout woke up from the dead and decided that it needed to be green instead of blue, so he used his magical powers to do so. The primary culprit is algae you say? I don't think so. It's Paul. Everyone thinks he graduated and left Menomonie, but really he used that as an excuse so he can spend even more time dying the lake green. Come to think of it, Paul couldn't have done it alone. He must've had a partner in crime. The only person who knows the ins and outs of UW-Stout and Menomonie, Johnny "Blaze" Blue Devil. That's it. Paul and Johnny used James Huff Stout's powers to make Lake Menomin green because UW- Stout is the only thing that can be blue in the town. That makes so much sense.

Toxic Towel Terrifies Tustison

Paul Lambas - November 6, 2024

Stout is asking students living in CKTO to evacuate the residence hall on Wednesday, Nov. 6, following a report from the Wisconsin Department of Health Services (WisDHS). In an official statement from DHS representative Wiff Smesson, he states "We were performing our normal yearly review of the chemicals Stout keeps in its laboratories and were requested to inspect the dormitories. We were alerted to a 1' by 1' synthetic towel used for cleaning dishes in the public kitchen. It smelled like a combination of dish soap, beef ramen, and general decay. A chemical analysis showed trace amounts of pneumonia, Ebola, coronavirus, scarlet fever, and black mold." The towel has since been declared a biological hazard.

"The towel was left crumpled up and wet in the sink for the whole summer," said the CKTO janitor. "That's how the smell and diseases stuck around for so long."

Student leaders are asking for solutions from local non-profits. We normally would just perform a controlled burn on this to destroy it," said a crew member of the local Conservation Corps, "but we can't because it's synthetic, and it would pollute the air and land." Another crew member was quoted as saying, "We can't kill it, but it'll probably kill us." At least one student is currently in the local Mayo Clinic being treated for toxic fume inhalation exposure. They are not expected to survive.

To quarantine the towel from the building, Chancellor Katherine Frank has enacted a scheduled lockdown of CKTO, set for Wednesday at 2 p.m. while a NEST (Nuclear Emergency Support Team) team removes the towel from the campus. "Students should be allowed back in immediately after the NEST team leaves, " said the RA of Tustison Hall. An anonymous student living in Tustison was quoted as saying of the evacuation, "Bruh, this sucks."
